ties, closest details of the lives of all the Presidents in regular order; can recite poems of 3,000 words without missing a word; can recount the details of every visit he has made in his life; can name all the persons he has met in two weeks, and every word every one of them said, and quote chapter after chapter of the Bible. One of his most interesting feats is the repetition of every word of a marriage ceremony which he heard when he was twenty-one, and which united a girl who was his sweetheart to another man. It is said that this is the first thing he ever tried to remember.

The Capture of Jefferson Davis.
(Chattanooga, Tenn., special.)

General Henry Harnden, the officer of the Union army who captured Jef-

Cottrell said of going into his barn one morning to feed his horse and finding a tramp there asleep. "I didn't turn the man out," said the old minister, gently, "but left him asleep; and, my brethren," added the Doctor, "if myself have slept just as sweetly in a hay-loft as I ever did in a church."

erson Davis, President of the Confederacy, was in Chattanooga recently with the Wisconsin Commission to locate the position of the troops of that State in the Chickamauga National Military Park.

"It is not true," said he, "that President Davis was in woman's attire when captured. It was a cold morning, about

The Rose and the Thorn.
(Detroit Free Press.)

She was no longer a rosebud.
Indeed, she was in full bloom, and had been so through several seasons.
But she had money, and he loved her.
How often men do that way.
Oh, money, thou art a honey.
So as time wore on and she grew no younger, his heart diminished.

Then General Harnden, who belonged to the First Wisconsin Cavalry, told how he was given 150 picked horsemen and given orders to capture Davis. They rode three nights and three days without rest. "The capture was made younger, till nearly fourteen more and more, until he stilled its throbbing by proposing to her.

He was so sure of her at that time of life, that anything but a prompt acceptance never occurred to him.

What was his intense, nay painful, surprise, then, to hear her say she was very much obliged to him for his kindness, but really she must decline.

without rest. The capture was made near Irwinville, in Irwin County, Ga. Just before the capture, a body of Michigan cavalry, on a similar expedition, and General Harnden's men collided. A fight ensued and two or three men on either side were killed and a number wounded before it was found out that they were friends instead of enemies.

"Oh, why, why?" he pleaded in heartbroken tones.

"Because I do not love you," she answered.

"But you can learn to love me," he said, coaxingly.

"I think not," she persisted.

"Oh, yes, you can," he exclaimed, grabbing at her lily white hand. "One

"When I reached the Davis camp," continued General Harnden, "the first man I spoke to was the Texas gentleman, now Senator Reagan who told me that he was the Postmaster General of the Confederate States. President Davis was sitting near by on a log, with a shawl. I presume his wife's, over his shoulders, as it was a cool morning."

How he too had to learn, you know."

Now even ever escaped alive it is no part of the chronicler's business to explain.

This is no detective tale.

advantageous. The last year's freeze was prevented to a great extent in this manner. Several market gardeners reported a great saving by the use of straw fires alone. Now the only disadvantage from this mode of protection is the fact that the air has to be still, as only a moderate breeze will cause the smoke to be blown away and do great damage to the plants.

It is always easier to offer advice than to accept it. And this is especially true when the person who offers the advice has less practical experience than those to whom it is offered, because the adviser cannot appreciate fully the difficulty of putting his advice into practice. Nevertheless, it is a fact, that a mere onlooker may at times be able to see more clearly the progress of a

A general rule to foretell the approach of frost when the weather bureau warnings cannot be had, is as follows:

If the local temperature has fallen to 30 or 45 degrees in early evening, if the sky is clear, and the wind light, and there is no reason to expect it to become cloudy or foggy or very windy, when it will be frosty in the early morning.
